Answer.......! [E (絵) = Picture Moji (文字) = Character, letter or text]

In 1990s, pagers/beepers became popular in Japan. Since the words could be fit into the small display, people became creative in sending their messages each other. Using picture characters to express their emotions digitally. Emojis became a universal font, but at the beginning, three big Japanese phone companies each had their own. Sometimes it did not "translate" to different cellular phones. Since mostly it was originally developed in Japan, you might find a lot of culturally related emoji like this!
